Plaintiff Rocío Sanchez Ponce, by and through her counsel, alleges the following on information and belief:

INTRODUCTION

This action challenges the U.S. Department of Homeland Security's ("DHS") unlawful 5 revocation of the employment authorization of Plaintiff Rocío Sanchez Ponce-a young California 6 resident who has lived in the Bay Area virtually her entire life-which was done solely on the basis 7 of a preliminary injunction entered by a U.S. District Court in Brownsville, Texas. Texas v. United 8 9 States, 86 F. Supp. 3d 591 (S.D. Tex. 2015), aff'd, 809 F.3d 134 (5th Cir. 2015), aff'd by an equally 10 divided court, 136 S. Ct. 2271 (2016) (per curiam). The preliminary injunction in Texas v. United 11 States, upon which Defendants relied in revoking Ms. Sanchez Ponce's employment authorization, 12 was unlawfully broad, as Texas and the other plaintiffs in that case lacked standing to obtain, and 13 the district court lacked jurisdiction or remedial authority to enter, a preliminary injunction reaching 14 California. Ms. Sanchez Ponce is not and has never been a party to the Texas v. United States 15 16 lawsuit, she did not have a full and fair opportunity to defend her interests in that action, and no 17 other party there adequately represented them. Defendants' revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's 18 employment authorization violated her rights under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 19 551 et seq.

20

Ms. Sanchez Ponce came to the United States from Mexico at age six and has lived in the Bay Area since, for nearly 17 years. Ms. Sanchez Ponce considers the Bay Area her only home. This is where she's made a life with her partner, who is a U.S. citizen, and her two young U.S. citizen children, ages 3 and 4 months.

In December 2014, Ms. Sanchez Ponce submitted her application for Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals ("DACA"), a federal initiative providing temporary relief from deportation that DHS established in 2012. DHS received her application on December 22, 2014, and approved it on February 11, 2015.

Pursuant to a November 20, 2014 announcement, which expanded the period of deferred action and employment authorization under DACA from two years to three, Defendants approved Ms. Sanchez Ponce's DACA application and employment authorization for a three-year period. Several months later, on May 1, 2015, DHS sent Ms. Sanchez Ponce a letter stating that her threeyear period of employment authorization had been revoked and replaced by an employment authorization valid for just two years. The sole ground given for this action was the preliminary injunction issued in Texas v. United States, 86 F. Supp. 3d 591 (S.D. Tex. 2015).

10 The government's reliance on the unlawfully broad Texas v. United States preliminary 11 injunction was legally erroneous. Ms. Sanchez Ponce asks this Court to: (1) declare that the 12 February 2015 preliminary injunction entered in Texas v. United States does not apply to California 13 residents such as herself; (2) declare unlawful Defendants' revocation of her employment 14 authorization; (3) vacate and set aside the unlawful revocation, and order reinstatement of Ms. 15 16 Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization; and (4) enjoin Defendants from revoking 17 her employment authorization on the basis of the preliminary injunction entered in Texas v. United 18 States.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

This Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, as this case arises under the United States Constitution and the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"), 5 U.S.C. § 551 et seq. This Court has remedial authority pursuant to the APA, id. § 706, as well as the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201-02.

Venue is proper in the Northern District of California because Plaintiff resides in the district.
 28 U.S.C. § 1391(e)(1). Venue also properly lies in the Northern District of California because a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to this action occurred in the district. Id. § 1391(b).

1	12. Under USCIS regulations, the agency has discretion to grant or deny employment
2	authorization applications and to establish the initial period of employment authorization.
3	13. Once the agency exercises its discretion and grants employment authorization, however,
4	federal regulations limit USCIS' authority to revoke the authorization. See 8 C.F.R. § 274a.14(b).
5	14. Revocation is permissible only when a condition upon which employment authorization was
6	granted has not been met or ceases to exist; upon a showing that the information in the application is not true
7	and correct; or for "good cause shown." Id. § 274a.14(b)(1).
8	15. None of these circumstances or enumerated grounds for revocation applied to Ms. Sanchez
9	Ponce.
10	16. Additionally, if USCIS seeks to revoke a non-citizen's authorization to work, regulations
11 12	require USCIS to provide written notice of intent before revoking employment authorization. Id. §
12	274a.14(b)(2). The notice must state the grounds upon which revocation is warranted, and once served, the 13	regulations provide the affected party fifteen days to submit countervailing evidence. Id.
15	17. Defendants failed to provide Ms. Sanchez Ponce with a written notice of intent prior to
16	revoking her employment authorization.
17	18. The regulations further provide that an affected party may not appeal the agency's
18	determination to revoke employment authorization. Id.
19	19. USCIS is bound by these regulations, which constrain its power to revoke employment
20	authorization for the period of time granted. Accordingly, these regulations create a legal right to a proper
21	process for revocation and a legitimate claim of entitlement to employment authorization once granted. See
22	id. § 274a.14(b).
23	20. Under the original 2012 DACA guidance, USCIS grants deferred action and employment
24	authorization for a period of two years, subject to renewal for additional two-year periods. Mem. of Janet
25	Napolitano, Sec'y of Homeland Security, to Alejandro Mayorkas, Director, USCIS, Exercising Prosecutorial
26	Discretion with Respect to Individuals Who Came to the United States as Children, June 15, 2012 ("2012
27	DACA Memorandum") (attached hereto as Exhibit A). Pursuant to the 2012 DACA Memorandum, individuals who came to the United States as children, lack a serious criminal history, attend school, and meet other criteria may request that the DHS Secretary grant them deferred action for a two-year period.

 Those granted deferred action in this manner are also eligible for employment authorization and a Social Security card. See id.

21. On November 20, 2014, President Obama and Secretary of Homeland Security Jeh Johnson announced a series of further executive actions for immigration relief, including the creation of the Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents ("DAPA") program. Mem. of Jeh Charles Johnson, Sec'y of Homeland Security, to León Rodríguez, Director, USCIS, Exercising Prosecutorial Discretion with Respect to Individuals Who Came to the United States as Children and with Respect to Certain Individuals Who Are the Parents of U.S. Citizens or Permanent Residents 3, Nov. 20, 2014 ("2014 DACA/DAPA Memorandum") (attached hereto as Exhibit B).

The 2014 DACA/DAPA Memorandum also outlined an expansion of DACA, liberalizing the eligibility criteria and authorizing the grant or renewal of deferred action and employment authorization for a period of three years ("expanded DACA"). Id.

The Texas v. United States Litigation

On December 3, 2014, Texas and thirteen other states, along with the governors of four additional states, filed a civil action in the Brownsville Division of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas against DHS Secretary Jeh Johnson and other federal immigration officials, seeking a preliminary injunction to halt the implementation of DAPA and expanded DACA. Eight more states and one state attorney general later joined the suit as plaintiffs.

24. Neither the State of California nor any California official joined the lawsuit as a party. Three Texas residents who were potential beneficiaries of DAPA moved to intervene, but the district court denied that motion.

25 25. Without holding an evidentiary hearing, Judge Andrew S. Hanen entered a preliminary injunction in favor of plaintiffs on February 16, 2015, enjoining the Secretary's implementation of DAPA and expanded DACA, including, of relevance here, the new DACA provision permitting a grant or renewal

Case 3:16-cv-06430 Document 1 Filed 11/03/16 Page 7 of 15

1	of deferred action and employment authorization for a period of three years. By its terms, the preliminary
2	injunction applied nationwide. Texas v. United States, 86 F. Supp. 3d 591, 677-78 (S.D. Tex. 2015).
3	26. Judge Hanen's preliminary injunction relied on a finding that Texas had sufficiently satisfied
4	the necessary standing requirements for the granting of injunctive relief. Id. at 620. The Court stated, "If
5	the majority of the DHS Directive beneficiaries residing in [Texas] apply for driver's licenses, Texas will
6	bear directly a $174.73 per applicant expense, costing the state millions of dollars." Id. Judge Hanen's order
7	was also based on a determination that adoption of DAPA and expanded DACA violated the APA's
8	procedural requirements, and that, consequently, Texas and other plaintiff states had a substantial likelihood
9	of success on the merits. Id. at 671-72.
10 11	27. The plaintiffs did not include class allegations in their complaint, and did not move for or
11	obtain class certification on a nationwide or other basis.
12	28. The government appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. On appeal,
14	fifteen states-including California-as well as the District of Columbia filed an amicus curiae brief in
15	support of the government.
16	29. These states and the District of Columbia denied that implementation of DAPA or expanded
17	DACA created any risk of harm to them, pointing out that the types of costs Texas alleged are a matter of
18	state choice, not federal coercion, and contending that the district court had little information to determine
19	the cost of licensing under DAPA and expanded DACA outside of Texas. They also argued that since the
20	only evidence of harm cited was confined to Texas, the preliminary injunction was overbroad, and the court
21	should at the very least limit it to plaintiff states, if not to Texas alone.
22	30. A divided Fifth Circuit panel affirmed entry of the preliminary injunction, Texas v. United
23	States, 809 F.3d 134 (5th Cir. 2015), while unanimously reversing the denial of the motion to intervene by
24	the three Texas residents who would be potential beneficiaries of DAPA, Texas v. United States, 805 F.3d
25	653 (5th Cir. 2015).
26	31. On June 23, 2016, the Supreme Court affirmed the Fifth Circuit decision by an equally
27	divided court, leaving the Fifth Circuit opinion in place without setting any precedent. United States v. Texas,
28

136 S. Ct. 2271 (2016) (per curiam), rehearing denied, 2016 WL 5640497 (Oct. 3, 2016); see Neil v. Biggers, 409 U.S. 188 (1972) (noting that "[t]he legal effect" of an equally divided opinion "would be the same if the appeal, or writ of error, were dismissed").

32. On May 19, 2016, Judge Hanen issued an expansive sanctions order, directing the government to file under seal a list of the names, addresses, contact information, and alien registration numbers of all individuals in the Plaintiff States granted benefits under the 2014 DACA/DAPA Memorandum between November 20, 2014 and March 3, 2015, for possible future release. Mem. Op. & Order, Texas v. United States, No. B-14-254 (S.D. Tex. May 19, 2016), ECF No. 347 ("Sanctions Order") (attached hereto as Exhibit C). He further ordered that "any attorney employed at the Justice Department in Washington, D.C. who appears, or seeks to appear, in a court (state or federal) in any of the 26 Plaintiff States annually attend a legal ethics course" for five years. Id. at 25-26. Following the filing of two petitions for writs of mandamus with the Fifth Circuit, Judge Hanen stayed the Sanctions Order pending further proceedings.

Plaintiff Rocío Sanchez Ponce

16 33. Rocío Sanchez Ponce was born in Mexico and raised in Hayward, California from the age 17 of six. Together with her partner, who is a U.S. citizen, Ms. Sancez Ponce is raising two young children, a 18 three-year-old boy and four-month-old girl, who are U.S. citizens. Ms. Sanchez Ponce's mother also lives 19 in the Bay Area and would likely be eligible for DAPA were it implemented. She has one older sister who 20 suffers from a severe medical condition, and two younger brothers, one of whom is a U.S. citizen and the 21 other of whom is a legal permanent resident. Ms. Sanchez Ponce consider the Bay Area her home, as it is 22 the only place she has lived since age six.

23

34. Ms. Sanchez Ponce attended Ruus Elementary School and Cesar E. Chavez Middle School in Hayward, California.

- 25

27

35. Ms. Sanchez Ponce attended Tennyson High School from 2007 until 2011. During this time she experienced increased exclusion from social and academic opportunities as result of her immigration status. Feeling discouraged about her ability to continue her education after high school, Ms. Sanchez Ponce

Case 3:16-cv-06430 Document 1 Filed 11/03/16 Page 9 of 15

decided mid-way through her senior year to stop attending high school in order to begin working to help support her mother and siblings.

36. When President Obama announced the DACA initiative in 2012, Ms. Sanchez Ponce experienced renewed hope in her future, and decided to return to school in order to complete her high school diploma. She completed her high school education at Hayward Adult School, graduating in May 2014.

6

Approval of DACA Application and Issuance of Three-Year EAD

7 37. On November 20, 2014, President Obama and the Secretary of Homeland Security
8 announced the expansion of DACA and the creation of DAPA. See supra ¶ 18-19; Exhibit B.

9 38. Ms. Sanchez Ponce submitted her application for DACA in December 2014. It took her over 10 six months to gather all of the necessary paperwork to demonstrate her eligibility, and to save enough money
11 for the application's $465 fee.

39. On February 11, 2015—just days before the court entered a preliminary injunction in Texas v. United States—DHS approved Ms. Sanchez Ponce's application for DACA. Pursuant to the expanded DACA memorandum, DHS granted Ms. Sanchez Ponce a three-year period of employment authorization, valid from February 11, 2015 to February 10, 2018. See USCIS, Forms I-797 Notice of Action (February (attached hereto as Exhibit D).

40. Ms. Sanchez Ponce was energized upon receiving deferred action and a three-year period of employment authorization. She had secured an offer of a well-paying job that offered benefits, but was contingent on her ability to prove that she was authorized to work lawfully in this country. With her DACA approved, Ms. Sanchez Ponce was finally able to accept this offer and begin work in a position that provided significantly more financial security for her and her family than they had previously experienced.

- 41. With the opportunities DACA has provided, Ms. Sanchez Ponce is saving to pay the tuition for cosmetology school, so that she can finally realize her dream of becoming a make-up artist. Ms. Sanchez Ponce's ability to start her career and provide for her family, however, remains uncertain—and additionally so because of Defendants' unlawful actions that are challenged here.

Revocation of Plaintiff's Three-Year Employment Authorization

42. On May 7, 2015, the federal government informed Judge Hanen that notwithstanding the court's February 16, 2015 preliminary injunction in Texas v. United States, USCIS had issued three-year terms of deferred action and employment authorization to approximately 2,000 individuals after that injunction was entered. See Defs.' May 7 Advisory, Texas v. United States, No. B-14-254, (S.D. Tex. 2015 filed May 7, 2015), ECF No. 247 ("May 7 Advisory") (attached hereto as Exhibit E). Ms. Sanchez Ponce is one of those individuals.

43. Although her DACA application was submitted and approved before the preliminary injunction in Texas v. United States was issued, Ms. Sanchez Ponce's EAD—the document required for Ms.
Sanchez Ponce to demonstrate that she is in fact work authorized—was not mailed until sometime after the injunction was entered.

44. On May 1, 2015, Defendants caused a letter to be sent to Ms. Sanchez Ponce instructing her to "immediately return to USCIS the EAD that has a 3-year validity period listed." USCIS Letter dated May 1, 2015, (attached hereto as Exhibit F). The letter also stated that Ms. Sanchez Ponce's failure to return her EAD might result in adverse action in her case. See id.

17 45. Defendant's letter gave only one explanation for the revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's 18 three-year employment authorization: "The reason for this action is that, after a court order in *Texas v. United*19 States, No. B-14-254 (S.D. Tex.), USCIS erroneously issued you a 3-year instead of 2-year approval notice 20 or notices and a 3-year instead of 2-year EAD." Id.

46. Ms. Sanchez Ponce has not appealed USCIS' revocation of her three-year employment authorization because there are no administrative avenues for her to do so. See 8 C.F.R. § 274a.14(b)(2).

documents, getting fingerprinted, and paying a total of $465 in fees.

23 24 47. Due to Defendants' revocation of her three-year employment authorization, Ms. Sanchez Ponce now must undertake an application for renewal of her DACA and employment authorization, which are set to expire on February 10, 2017. The renewal process requires locating, acquiring, and submitting

48. Ms. Sanchez Ponce stopped working when her youngest child was born. Now that her child

1	is four months old, she is currently in the process of looking for work. She is concerned that the prolonged
2	and uncertain duration of the renewal process could result in gaps in her work authorization and therefore
3	her ability to obtain work.
4	49. In revoking Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization and issuing a two-
5	year authorization in its place, USCIS did not refund her the $465 in fees or any portion thereof.
6	50. Although Ms. Sanchez Ponce did not participate in the Texas v. United States litigation,
7	Defendants revoked and deprived her of her three-year period of employment authorization on the sole
8	ground of the preliminary injunction entered in that case.
9	51. Ms. Sanchez Ponce had no opportunity to contest the revocation of her three-year
10 11	employment authorization or to vindicate her rights.
11	52. At no time have any of the parties to Texas v . United States attempted to join to that litigation
12	either Ms. Sanchez Ponce or others who had three-year employment authorizations revoked, or otherwise
14	allow Ms. Sanchez Ponce her day in court.
15	53. The plaintiffs in Texas v. United States lacked standing to seek or obtain a nation-wide
16	injunction requiring Defendants to revoke Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization and
17	her duly issued three-year EAD.
18	54. Further, the plaintiffs in that case lacked standing to assert injury arising from California
19	residents receiving three-year terms of employment authorization.
20	55. Because "[t]he remedy must of course be limited to the inadequacy that produced the injury
21	in fact," Lewis v. Casey, 518 U.S. 343, 357 (1996), the injury-in-fact found by the Texas court in issuing a
22	nationwide preliminary injunction-the marginal cost to Texas and potentially to Indiana and Wisconsin of
23	issuing driver's licenses to individuals newly eligible for them under state law due to the receipt of deferred
24	action-was "a patently inadequate basis for imposition of system-wide relief," id. at 359.
25	56. The court in Texas lacked both jurisdiction and remedial authority to enter a nationwide
26	preliminary injunction that was broader than necessary to remedy the specific harm to the plaintiffs, see
27	Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 702 (1979), because it had neither made a final determination as to the

- lawfulness of any agency rule nor found concrete evidence of irreparable harm to persons or states other than 2 one named plaintiff, see Lewis, 518 U.S. at 349-50, 349 n.1 (holding that a district court's overly broad injunction, in light of the scope of plaintiffs' standing, raised a jurisdictional issue).
- 57. Ms. Sanchez Ponce does not possess a Texas driver's license, has never resided in Texas, 5 and disclaims all intention of moving there or applying for a Texas driver's license during the term of the three-year employment authorization that she received from USCIS.

58. The state where Ms. Sanchez Ponce resides, California, has denied that the implementation of the November 20, 2014 memorandum would cause the harm necessary to issue an injunction applicable in that state.

- 59. Even if Ms. Sanchez Ponce moved to Texas while possessing a three-year term of 11 employment authorization, she would be required by law to notify USCIS of a change of address within ten 12 days. 8 C.F.R. § 265.1. At that time, and if still subject to the Texas v. United States preliminary injunction, 13 USCIS could revoke Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization and provide her with a two-14 year period of employment authorization instead. 15
- 60. Furthermore, even if Ms. Sanchez Ponce moved to Texas with a three-year EAD in hand and 16 applied for a Texas driver's license without informing USCIS of her change of address, Ms. Sanchez Ponce 17 would be flagged by USCIS's Systematic Alien Verification for Entitlements ("SAVE") system, which the 18 19 Texas Department of Public Safety uses to confirm the eligibility of each driver's license applicant. At that 20 point, USCIS could revoke Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization and provide her with 21 a two-year period of employment authorization instead. Nonetheless, Ms. Sanchez Ponce has no intention 22 of moving to or seeking a driver's license in Texas.

- 61. This Court has the jurisdiction and authority to determine whether Defendants' revocation 24 of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization violated her rights. See 5 U.S.C. §§ 702, 706; 25 Martin v. Wilks, 490 U.S. 755, 758-59 (1989) (holding that litigants deprived of legal rights by a prior action 26 to which they were not parties could bring a collateral attack against the consent decree resulting from that 27 action).

1	62. Ms. Sanchez Ponce is entitled to relief in this court because the Texas injunction jeopardizes
2	her legally protected interest in her three-year employment authorization. See McNary v. Haitian Refugee
3	Ctr., Inc., 498 U.S. 479, 491 (1991) (holding that where employment authorization was granted upon
4	noncitizen's filing of nonfrivolous agricultural worker application, "the impact of a denial on the opportunity
5	to obtain gainful employment [was] plainly sufficient to mandate constitutionally fair procedures").
6	63. Defendants' revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization is not
7	in accordance with law. USCIS erred in revoking Ms. Sanchez Ponce's employment authorization based on
8	an overly broad preliminary injunction entered by a court in Texas that lacked jurisdiction to reach California
9	residents.
10	64. Defendants' revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year employment authorization was
11	done without observance of procedure required by law, as it violates binding USCIS regulations that permit
12 13	revocation only when a condition upon which employment authorization was granted has not been met or
13 14	ceases to exist; upon a showing that the information in the application is not true and correct; or for "good
15	cause shown," 8 C.F.R. § 274a.14(b)—none of which were or are present with regard to Ms. Sanchez Ponce.
16	65. Ms. Sanchez Ponce is aggrieved by Defendants' final agency action in revoking her three-
17	year employment authorization.
18	66. Ms. Sanchez Ponce has exhausted her administrative remedies. See 8 C.F.R. § 274a.14(b)(2)
19	("The decision by the district director shall be final and no appeal shall lie from the decision to revoke the
20	authorization.").

24	67. Ms. Sanchez Ponce repeats and incorporates by reference each and every allegation
25	contained in the preceding paragraphs as if fully set forth herein.
26	68. Defendants' revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's employment authorization was not in
27	accordance with law, in violation of the APA, 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A), in that it was based on a legal error-
28	namely, the unlawfully broad preliminary injunction entered in Texas v. United States, which was entered

2	69. Ms. Sanchez Ponce is entitled to request that this Court declare her legal right not to have
3	her employment authorization revoked based on a legal error, vacate and set aside the revocation, and enjoin
4	Defendants from revoking her employment authorization on the basis of the Texas injunction. 5 U.S.C. §

7	ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE ACT
8	70. Ms. Sanchez Ponce repeats and incorporates by reference each and every allegation
9	contained in the preceding paragraphs as if fully set forth herein.
10	71. Defendants' revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's employment authorization was not done
11	"for good cause shown" or for any other reason permitted by 8 C.F.R. § 274a.14, and was thus done "without
12	observance of procedure required by law," in violation of the APA, 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(D).
13	72. Ms. Sanchez Ponce is entitled to request that this Court declare her legal right not to have
14	her employment authorizations revoked without observance of procedure required by law, vacate and set
15	aside the revocation, and enjoin Defendants from revoking her employment authorization on the basis of the
16	Texas preliminary injunction. 5 U.S.C. § 706(2); 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201-02.
17	PRAYER FOR RELIEF
18	WHEREFORE, Plaintiff respectfully request the Court to:
19	(a) Issue a declaratory judgment stating that the February 2015 preliminary injunction entered in Texas
20	v. United States does not apply to California residents such as Ms. Sanchez Ponce;
21
22	(b) Issue a declaratory judgment stating that Defendants' revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year
23	employment authorization based on the preliminary injunction issued in Texas v. United States was
24	an "agency action" that was "not in accordance with law," in violation of the APA, 5 U.S.C. §
25	706(2)(A);
26	(c) Issue a declaratory judgment stating that Defendants' revocation of Ms. Sanchez Ponce's three-year
27	employment authorization was an "agency action" that was "without observance of procedure
28	required by law," in violation of the APA, 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(D), as it was not premised on any
