NATIONAL IMMIGRATION LAW CENTER Fellowship Opportunities

---

MAY 2009

The National Immigration Law Center invites volunteer law firm associates and deferred new hires to apply for volunteer placement at NILC's Washington, DC, office.

As a national legal advocacy organization working for social justice, NILC's mission is to promote and advance the rights and opportunities of low-income immigrants and their families. Since 1979, NILC has established a national reputation for its expertise on immigration law and the public benefits and employment rights of low-income immigrants. We conduct policy and legal analysis, legislative and administrative advocacy, class action and impact litigation, and provide training, publications, and technical assistance for a broad range of groups throughout the U.S., including immigrant rights coalitions, legal aid programs, community and faith-based groups, worker advocates, community and labor organizers, government agencies, policymakers, and the media.

NILC seeks fellowship applicants to work in our DC office on immigration reform policy issues benefiting low-income immigrants in one or more of NILC's priority areas: immigration law, including due process and access to lawful status; immigrant workers' rights and employment issues; and access to health care and public benefits. NILC will work closely with the selected applicants to ensure that the volunteer's skills are matched with a project that is integral to NILC's priorities and meets a core need in the immigrant community. For more information on NILC, see www.nilc.org.

To apply, please submit a detailed cover letter describing your interest and experience in issues affecting low-income immigrants and in social and economic justice, in policy work in general, and your preferred area of work, if you have one. Your cover letter should also address your likely start and end date.

Applications will be taken on a rolling basis. Please send the cover letter, résumé, transcript, a list of three references, and a writing sample to:
